

National Landscape Conservation System

Vision, Objectives, and Mission

Vision:

BLM's Great American Landscapes—healthy, wild and open.

Objectives:

- Above all, commit to conserving, protecting, and restoring special values of the landscape, as directed in the Bureau of Land Management's organic act (the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA)).
- Build and sustain community relationships to foster collaborative stewardship.
- Continue to manage compatible uses and valid existing rights consistent with the values for which the area was designated.
- Provide opportunities for the individual to explore and discover these special areas.
- Foster scientific research and public education and acquire a better understanding of how to manage these landscapes.

Mission:

The mission of the National Landscape Conservation System is to conserve, protect, and restore these nationally significant landscapes that have outstanding cultural, ecological, and scientific values for the benefit of current and future generations.
